“Continually Challenged & Blessed in My Daily Life”

Because the effects of the EMAW study on my life continue to manifest themselves nearly every week for the last six months, I find it a little challenging trying to articulate how the EMAW curriculum has impacted my life.

Before the study, I think my routine for quiet times was quite passive, but now with new skills learned from Book One, I feel a lot more engaged with the Word, the Holy Spirit, and ultimately closer to Christ each day. Book One set the stage for Book Two.

Discussing the issues and concerns raised in book two from a Christian man's perspective with other Christian men helped provide clarity and understanding for some unresolved issues in my past and put them to rest. Also, listening to other men's challenges and sharing some of my personal experiences with the men in my group allowed God to teach me (probably all of us) lessons that I could not have learned on my own. Also, it's been a great confidence boost going forward knowing and applying God's perspective and instructions on marriage and raising children.

After being involved in the study for the last six months, the most surprising thing to me is how I am continually challenged and blessed in my daily life by EMAW. Yes, I have very high anticipation for what God has in store for myself and fellow group members as we cover the lessons in Book Three.

I hope sharing a few of my thoughts about EMAW helps you prepare for the presentation next month.

Blessings, Scott Coldwell
